Attorneys Battle Oil Company for Victim of Icy Slip

Attorneys representing a man who slipped at a service station have won a verdict of $75,000 against the oil company. Their client, who had stopped at a self-service gas station to get fuel, slipped on a patch of ice near the pumps. As a result of the fall, the man dislocated his shoulder. Despite the oil company fighting the case, the attorneys of Liever, Hyman and Potter, based in Reading, Pennsylvania, won a verdict of $75,000 for their client.
