Cable worker felled when car strikes ladder; lawyers strike $295K settlement

A cable company employee performing a residential disconnect was seriously injured when a car attempting to drive around the van struck the ladder on which the employee was working. The cable company employee, who suffered serious wrist fractures and other injuries, was represented by the Reading, Pennsylvania firm of Liever, Hyman and Potter. The attorneys obtained a $175,000 settlement against the responsible motorist and their client's underinsured motorist insurance company, plus $120,000 from their client's workers' compensation insurance company.
