Passenger killed when car crashes into ditch. Lawsuit by family settled for $1.4 million.

A car with several passengers was going down a steep hill on a Pennsylvania state roadway when the driver allowed her vehicle to edge off the road surface to the right. There was a drop off and no berm; when she tried to correct her steering she lost control, went across the roadway and crashed in a ditch.

The law firm of Liever, Hyman & Potter represented the estate of a deceased passenger against the driver and the Highway Department responsible for roadway design and maintenance. They obtained a settlement of over $1,400,000 for the deceased's family.
